

Worked Example: Oats Overnight

A full pass through the OS, from research pack to production-ready check, on a single brand.

CONTENTS

- | | |
|---------------------------------|---------------------------|
| 1. Research Pack | 6. Video Brief Builder |
| 2. Research Insights Simplifier | 7. Static Brief Builder |
| 3. Concept Builder | 8. Quality Control |
| 4. Angle Builder | 9. Production Ready Check |
| 5. Hook Builder | |

Research Pack

For the worked example, we do not need to show the entire long research report.

We can show a small box:

Assume the Research Pack found recurring themes around:

- Busy mornings
- Breakfast being skipped
- Wanting something quick and portable
- Protein and satiety
- Taste and texture concerns
- Subscription questions
- People wanting breakfast without cooking
- Different needs between busy professionals, fitness-focused buyers, parents, and people who normally skip breakfast

NEXT STEP: RUN THE RESEARCH INSIGHTS SIMPLIFIER.

Research Insights Simplifier

TOP DESIRES

What this means: What do they really want?

- Have breakfast without slowing down the morning.
- They want something they can grab quickly.
- Stay full until later in the day.
- They do not want breakfast that feels too small.
- Get more protein without cooking.
- Make breakfast easier to stick to.
- Enjoy something that actually tastes good.

TOP PAIN POINTS

What this means: What problems or frustrations are they dealing with?

- Mornings feel rushed.
- Breakfast is easy to skip.
- Cooking creates extra work and cleanup.
- Planning breakfast every day takes effort.
- Some convenient breakfasts do not feel satisfying enough.

TOP OBJECTIONS

What this means: What are they unsure, worried, or skeptical about?

- "Will this actually keep me full?"
- "Will I like the taste?"
- "Is it worth the price?"
- "Is the subscription easy to manage?"
- "Is this really easier than what I already eat?"

TOP TRIGGER MOMENTS

What this means: What happened that made them start looking for a solution?

- Leaving home without eating again.

- Realizing there is no time to cook before work.
- Feeling hungry soon after arriving at work.
- Starting a new fitness or nutrition routine.
- Getting tired of buying breakfast on the way to work.

TOP BUYER SEGMENTS

What this means: Which groups share a similar situation or motivation?

Busy Young Professional

Rushes out the door and often skips breakfast.

Fitness-Focused Professional

Wants protein and convenience without cooking.

Busy Parent

Takes care of everyone else first and forgets their own breakfast.

Former Breakfast Skipper

Does not enjoy heavy breakfasts but wants something easy enough to stick with.

Convenience-First Buyer

Values saving time and reducing morning decisions.

PERSONA GAP

What this means: Which strong buyer type may not be represented enough in current creative?

POSSIBLE GAP: BUSY PARENT.

The product can fit a morning where the parent is preparing everyone else for the day, but their own breakfast gets pushed aside.

Label: Strategic inference. Needs account audit before confirming.

TOP WHITE-SPACE OPPORTUNITIES

What this means: What useful messages or situations may not be talked about enough?

- Breakfast competing with time, not hunger.
- “Breakfast for people who normally skip breakfast.”
- Night-before preparation as a morning productivity tool.
- Breakfast during the school-run chaos of a busy parent.
- Reducing morning decisions, not simply reducing cooking.

TOP BELIEFS / MISBELIEFS

What this means: What do people believe that may affect whether they buy?

- “Eating breakfast means waking up earlier.”
- “Convenient breakfast will not keep me full.”
- “High-protein breakfast requires cooking.”
- “Meal-prep takes a lot of time.”
- “Subscription products are difficult to cancel.”

TOP PROOF POINTS CUSTOMERS NEED

What this means: What do they need to see or believe?

- Preparation really is simple.
- It fits into a rushed morning.
- It looks like a real breakfast, not a tiny snack.
- Customers enjoy the flavors.
- Subscription terms are clear and manageable.

TOP VOC

What this means: Which customer words are useful for creative?

For a real project, insert exact verified quotes here.

For this teaching example:

“rushed mornings”

“grab and go”

“skip breakfast”

“keep me full”

“no time to cook”

Note: These are teaching placeholders, not presented as verified customer quotes.

TOP PURCHASE DRIVERS

What this means: What makes them want to choose the product?

- Easy night-before prep.
- Grab-and-go convenience.
- Protein.
- Variety of flavors.
- Less morning planning.

TOP FRICTIONS

What this means: What makes buying slower, harder, or easier to delay?

- Price comparison with normal oats.
- Uncertainty around subscription.
- Too many flavor choices.
- Unsure whether they will like the texture.
- Not understanding how preparation works.

Creative Strategy Cheat Sheet

FIELD	ANSWER
Most important desire	Breakfast without making the morning harder.
Most important pain	Breakfast gets skipped when time gets tight.
Biggest objection	"Will this actually be enough for me?"
Strong trigger moment	Running late and leaving home without breakfast.
Promising buyer segment	Busy professional.
Possible persona gap	Busy parent.
White-space opportunity	Breakfast as a time problem, not just a nutrition problem.
Belief to build	Breakfast does not have to add work to the morning.
Proof needed	Show how quickly it fits into the routine.
Useful VOC	"Skip breakfast."
Purchase driver	Grab-and-go convenience.
Friction	Subscription uncertainty.

PASS

Why:

Desires are different from pain points.

Trigger moments describe when the need becomes urgent.

Purchase drivers explain why the product becomes attractive.

Objections describe doubt.

Frictions describe what slows the purchase.

Exploratory findings are labeled.

Language is simple.

STRATEGIST APPROVED ✓

Concept Builder

AI generates several options.

CONCEPT 1

Breakfast That Keeps Up With You

Persona: Busy professional

Desire: Eat breakfast without slowing the morning down.

Offer role: Oats Overnight can be prepared before bed and grabbed in the morning.

Idea source: Research insight + customer situation

Why test it: It positions breakfast around one of the person's biggest morning problems: time.

CONCEPT 2

Breakfast for Breakfast Skippers

Persona: Person who regularly skips breakfast

Desire: Eat something without turning breakfast into another chore.

Idea source: Buyer behavior + creative exploration

CONCEPT 3

Your Night-Before Morning Hack

Persona: Busy professional

Desire: Make mornings easier.

Idea source: Product behavior + platform-native "life hack" framing

Notice Concept 3 does not need to pretend it came directly from customer research. It can still be a valid creative exploration.

CONCEPT QC

SELECTED

Breakfast That Keeps Up With You

CHECK

- ✓ Persona + Desire + Offer intersect
- ✓ One clear big idea
- ✓ Easy to explain
- ✓ Not simply a product benefit
- ✓ Not a hook
- ✓ Not a format
- ✓ Worth developing further

STRATEGIST APPROVED ✓

Angle Builder

Same concept: Breakfast That Keeps Up With You

AI generates several persuasion approaches.

ANGLE 1

You do not need more time in the morning. You need breakfast that fits the time you already have.

Persuasion job: Reframe the problem from “I need more time” to “I need a better-fitting breakfast.”

Awareness: Problem / Solution-Aware

ANGLE 2

Your breakfast can be ready before your morning even starts.

Persuasion job: Make night-before preparation feel like the solution.

ANGLE 3

The first thing you skip when you are rushing does not have to be breakfast.

Persuasion job: Connect directly to the recurring behavior.

SELECTED

“You do not need more time in the morning. You need breakfast that fits the time you already have.”

CHECK

- ✓ Persuasion approach, not just benefit
- ✓ Fits the concept
- ✓ Fits the busy professional
- ✓ Supports the desire
- ✓ Appropriate for Problem / Solution-Aware audience
- ✓ Clear in one sentence

STRATEGIST APPROVED ✓

Hook Builder

Selected angle stays fixed.

HOOK 1

“Breakfast shouldn’t make you late for work.”

Type: Problem Callout

HOOK 2

“POV: You have seven minutes before you need to leave.”

Type: POV / Situation

HOOK 3

“If breakfast is the first thing you skip when you’re rushing, this is for you.”

Type: Persona / Problem Callout

HOOK 4

“I stopped trying to find more time for breakfast.”

Type: Reframe

HOOK 5

“What if breakfast was already done before your alarm went off?”

Type: Curiosity / Desire

HOOK QC

SELECTED

“Breakfast shouldn’t make you late for work.”

“POV: You have seven minutes before you need to leave.”

“If breakfast is the first thing you skip when you’re rushing, this is for you.”

CHECK

- ✓ Earn attention
- ✓ Create relevance
- ✓ Frame the same argument
- ✓ Match awareness
- ✓ All three can lead into one body
- ✓ Clear language
- ✓ No unsupported claim

STRATEGIST APPROVED ✓

Video Brief Builder

HYPOTHESIS

If we frame breakfast around saving time instead of nutrition alone, we believe Oats Overnight may feel more relevant to busy professionals who skip breakfast when mornings get rushed.

BRIEF FIELD	DECISION
Desire	"I want breakfast without adding another task to my morning."
Persona	Busy professional who often skips breakfast when running late.
Offer	Oats Overnight.
Awareness	Problem / Solution-Aware.
Concept	Breakfast That Keeps Up With You.
Angle	You do not need more time in the morning. You need breakfast that fits the time you already have.
Voice	Busy professional. Why: They can naturally tell the story from personal experience.
Format	Morning-routine Talking Head + B-roll.
Reference ad	If available, use only for pacing, camera treatment, framing, and editing style.

SCRIPT

HOOKS

- 1 “Breakfast shouldn’t make you late for work.”
- 2 “POV: You have seven minutes before you need to leave.”
- 3 “If breakfast is the first thing you skip when you’re rushing, this is for you.”

BODY

“I used to skip breakfast whenever my morning got busy because I didn’t have another 15 minutes to cook and clean up.

So now I prep this before bed.

In the morning, it’s already in the fridge.

I grab it, put it in my bag, and eat when I get to work.

I didn’t need to wake up earlier.

I needed breakfast that worked with the morning I already had.”

CTA

“If breakfast keeps losing to the clock, check out Oats Overnight.”

VISUAL DIRECTION

MOMENT

SHOT

Hook	Show phone clock: 7:53 AM.
"Skip breakfast..."	Creator grabs keys and work bag.
"Prep this before bed."	Quick evening prep shot.
"Already in the fridge."	Open fridge.
"Put it in my bag."	Product goes directly into work bag.
Final message	Creator leaves home.
CTA	Product shot + CTA.

VIDEO QUALITY CONTROL

- ✓ One persona
- ✓ One desire
- ✓ One concept
- ✓ One angle
- ✓ Correct awareness
- ✓ Three hooks lead to one body
- ✓ Script sounds spoken, not written
- ✓ Simple words
- ✓ Short sentences
- ✓ Roughly fifth-grade readability
- ✓ No high-faluting language
- ✓ Product appears naturally
- ✓ Visuals support the words
- ✓ CTA is clear
- ✓ No invented proof
- ✓ Production team knows what to make

STRATEGIST APPROVED ✓

Static Brief Builder

For the worked example, show a reference static ad.

Let's say the reference uses:

- Large question headline
- Person in a rushed morning scene
- Product beside them
- Small supporting line
- Simple CTA

We borrow the execution only.

HYPOTHESIS

If we make the rushed-morning problem immediately recognizable, busy professionals may quickly understand why the product is relevant.

BRIEF FIELD

DECISION

Desire	Breakfast without making the morning harder.
Persona	Busy professional.
Offer	Oats Overnight.
Awareness	Problem-Aware.
Concept	Breakfast That Keeps Up With You.
Angle	Breakfast should fit the time you already have.
Voice	Brand / customer-style message.
Format	Static + Problem Callout.

REFERENCE

BORROW

- Large question headline
- Simple hierarchy
- Persona visible in the scene
- Product clearly shown
- Minimal supporting copy

DO NOT BORROW

Do not borrow the original brand, angle, claims, or message.

HEADLINE OPTIONS

H1

Breakfast always the first thing you skip?

H2

Running late again? Breakfast is already ready.

H3

Breakfast shouldn't make you late for work.

CORE MESSAGE

Prep it at night. Grab it in the morning.

CTA

Check out Oats Overnight.

VISUAL DIRECTION

- Busy professional near the door.
- Work bag, keys, and phone visible.
- Phone shows morning time.
- Oats Overnight is being taken from the fridge or placed into the work bag.
- Keep the layout simple.
- Do not fill the frame with icons or benefits.

VISUAL HIERARCHY

1

“Breakfast always the first thing you skip?”

2

Rushed professional + product.

3

“Prep it at night. Grab it in the morning.”

STATIC QUALITY CONTROL

- ✓ Understandable in about one second
- ✓ One main message
- ✓ Persona immediately recognizable
- ✓ Problem matches the visual
- ✓ Product role is clear
- ✓ Correct awareness level
- ✓ Simple headline
- ✓ No clutter
- ✓ No fake proof
- ✓ Reference execution adapted, not copied
- ✓ Clear reading order
- ✓ Landing page should continue the same story

STRATEGIST APPROVED ✓

Quality Control

At the end, the OS can show a combined check:

STRATEGY

- ✓ Persona
- ✓ Desire
- ✓ Offer
- ✓ Awareness
- ✓ Concept
- ✓ Angle
- ✓ Hypothesis

COPY

- ✓ Relevant hooks
- ✓ One main message
- ✓ Simple language
- ✓ Human delivery
- ✓ Clear CTA
- ✓ No unsupported claims

VISUAL

- ✓ Supports copy
- ✓ Product visible
- ✓ Persona visible
- ✓ Clear hierarchy
- ✓ Executable

CONVERSION POTENTIAL

- ✓ Audience can quickly understand why this matters
- ✓ Product's role in solving the problem is clear
- ✓ Desire is reinforced
- ✓ Enough belief is built for the awareness level
- ✓ Next step is obvious

STEP 09

Production Ready Check

Final question:

Can another person produce this without having to invent the strategy, copy, or visual idea?

YES.

READY FOR PRODUCTION ✓